Dearest Theodul —

Polly and I at this point are securely tucked away in our creaking gold beds at the "fancy chiel." Gunther, dear Gunther, we are in Paris!

I must say, it is too lovely for words this time of year — blossom trees sprouting in all directions with the most violent colours imaginable. We sleepily flew in at dawn yesterday after a sad send-off from Geneva by Katy — I think she was not happy at the thought of being left alone in Geneva —

We spent the first few hours doing business chores and calling friends — then I was taken by a hot little cab to the Place Vendôme — a sharp turn to the left and we had arrived —

Guess where? The City Bar, of course! One quick perusal and I felt as if we were at the St Regis at cocktail time — Nothing but loud

Americans trying to outdo one another with their travels and exploits - Among those present were John Sterling and Brayton Marvel - both with watery eyes and fuzzy tongues - He left as soon as possible and went for a bite of dinner before dashing to the Opéra Comique for a wonderful performance of "Barber of Seville." Home again to a very disturbing series of events — Our room is very unfortunately located next to a honeymoon couple who were performing avec mucho gusto — Great sighs, a few screams, the twang of bed springs etc — When next seen Pally and I were practically climbing up the wall; and so, to preserve the furniture, the management is having us moved today — in a few minutes, in fact!

Today we shall make the tour of some of the galleries — Today I shall try not to miss Zermatt, Thodul (not and all those things which Paris does not contain.

My, but we did have fun - My, but we are glad you took us under your wing. Really, my love, you made the trip perfect for both of us.

Hope you have a happy Easter, yours away -

Sunday we at 9th — New York supposedly booms into view at 7⁴⁵ a.m. and Mr. Philip Capp at about 9:30 — Ugh! She thought is loathsome.

Write me, please do! I want to hear all you are up to; not whom.

Many thanks again for the heavenly scarf — It is really beautiful —

Also for taking care of all those hideous details we both left behind —

Happy trip. We talk about you, miss you, think of you and send — Lots of love, especially me.

Dearest Theodul —

You are indeed a very bad monkey — Gordie just gave me a mental spanking for not writing, and all this time I haven't had a remote idea of your whereabouts — Would it not be a pity — You would have been flooded with epistles! He said you were having a whirl, as I am sure you are.

Have just finished a blissful three day week-end, with heavenly warm weather; much swimming and marvellous tennis. Even won at the horse races which was frosting on the cake.

Saw Gordie last Wednesday eve and he was still suffering from a European and German glad. I guess we all got fooled by those two who all that time had big things tucked up their sleeves. I must say, they certainly had a story book romance.
He has been very quiet since returning — hasn't wanted to see anyone or get back into the mad room of things, which is more than understandable.

Sed is in the middle of a Torrid romance with Kat Thomas' ex-room-mate. They are inseparable!

And weren't you more than surprised at the merger of Patterson and Slade. That one really left me with my teeth hanging out.

Nothing but a series of weddings on the horizon. Four in the next two weeks — Sob!

"Pauli" is still floating around Europe and Katy has finally settled in Rome (I think).

I've received a few glowing reports from each which you can peruse when you return.

I'm writing on my lap at the dentist's — sigh — and he is about to plunge into a large cavern — so must be off.

Write me, you monster — and hurry home! Love me.

Dearest Love Things, our soul and mine are most communicative about your whole being and scheduled date of return, so I am resigned to this

- means of welcoming you home

And a tardy hug and kiss for your wonderful Christmas gift. It was such a nice surprise, and you were so sweet to have thought of me. The Shepherdesses were away for the three days of Christmas, and by the time we had returned you were in for the snowy sleep.

I will soon bring in wondering what you are doing a hour this minute. I hope it is Germant and that you will have a guess for me. You would love to be there this minute. Now it is raining and miserable, and I've not even had one word

A card from Paul - dear himself - he's had escapades in the Caribbean. He and the galaxy (???) are island hopping for two months, and she says it is a wonderful way to waste away the winter. I can just see her sailing on a dingy white wash with her long black hair and a high, stab, pant, and all these other your other words.

So, my love, I long to see

I can't wait to hear all about your love and laughs.

So many thanks again for your sweet card and delicious present. It is now a constant use and a perpetual reminder of me & also baby & heres.

Love you,

Wednesday —

Dearest Dear —

Many thanks for your letter — It made me more than red faced as I read over the long list of nasty errands I left for you to do — You were really too kind to have gone to so much trouble with my package, tips etc. What else I have done without you? (or am I repeating myself again) A check for $11.00 will be waiting for your arrival.

By the way, I'm glad my slippers were under the right bed 😊

Went to a typical N.Y. cocktail party last evening with most of the "group" present. I was rather gaunched upon for news of you by Oakley, Ted etc. The former loved our cards — the latter, I fear, did not fully appreciate the monumental past card from St. Moritz. Our qualms were well founded — Theodore didn't even read all the words. Only hope he saved it so that it can be framed and later appreciated by literary connoisseurs. I must say, Mr. J. looks extremely well and in fine spirits. He has been taking jaunts to Bermuda, which has never done anyone any harm.

I had lunch on Sunday with Pearl Mesta, who is a fascinating person. She mentioned my coming with her on her next U. S.

lecture tour. I would be thrilled to do so, but am probably not well enough qualified to handle all the necessary details (short-hand etc.)

I received a long, long letter from Katy, who is still in Geneva working on a temporary basis for the Conference. I would give ten toes to be in her shoes, although the atmosphere might be rather depressing. She plans to go to Geneva in three weeks for C.A.R.E. Had a dreary and rainy Easter in Lausanne where she seemed to do nothing but knit on her coral coat. Better, however, than a rainy week-end in New York.
No word from Sally dear —

only from her family who have heard nothing from her for three weeks - I assured them she was not in Fermat under a snow bank.

Aside from dashing from work to the McCarthy hearings and back again, Larry and I have been spending all our time looking for a four-wheeled machine.
Thus, my news is more than dreary -

You might enjoy the newest song hit of New York. "If I had known you were taking, I would have come in your cake" ☺

At that I shall sign off.

Stay well and happy and hurry home.

Love,
Pat
